

VICTORY AGAIN ELUDES YANKEES

Chance's Cohorts Seem About to Win First Home Game When Rally of Red Sox Makes It a Tie.

WOOD NO PUZZLE IN BOX

Superb Fielding in Outer Works Saves Day for Him on Several Occasions When New York Hits Mean Runs.

A handful of fans whom lowering skies could not discourage entertained the faint hope of a suspension yesterday that the Yankees were going to win their first game of the season at the Polo Grounds. After a fairly successful tour through the West, where improved habits were cultivated, the Chance-led tallenders arrived home optimistically, and with the best of intentions started out to do things to the celebrated Joe Wood, of the Boston Red Sox. But just at the crucial moment, with victory almost in sight, the champions tied the score, and darkness fell after ten innings of combat with the count 2 to 3.

Ray Keating, fired to deeds of valor by one victory over the Boston team this season, was named by the Peerless Leader to preside over the long-prayed-for administration of a defeat to some one, no matter who. But Raymond gave indications in the first round that the gloomy weather had depressed his spirits, and after he had allowed the Red Sox to push a couple of runs across the plate he was removed in favor of Fisher, another Raymond. The latter left little to be desired in the way of mound work. He ploughed through the nine innings, keeping five hits scattered and giving two passes. Only once did the visitors threaten. That was in the eighth when they tied the score. Then it required two hits, a pass and a sacrifice fly to manufacture one run.

Joe Wood, whose backwardness is one of the big reasons for the lowly position of the world's champions, was by no means at his best. His control was far from what it ought to be, and the Yankees tickled his curves for eight hits. Some remarkable work by the Boston outfield saved the brilliant Joe time and again. He undersigned four passes and hit a batsman. He also made a wild pitch, which came at a crucial time with the bases filled, so that the Yankees scored a run thereby. Six men were struck out by the Boston star, and his success in keeping his hits scattered, coupled with fast support, kept the Yankees from celebrating.

Janviri, the younger who has been transferred from first to third, was in the thick of the fray every minute, and left a deep impression on the game. He not only shined brilliantly in the field, handling seven chances without an error, but he figured prominently in the scoring. It was his sacrifice fly with the bases filled in the eighth that brought Yerkes home with the run which tied the score, while in the first he interpolated a timely single into a rally which meant the downfall of Keating.

Each member of the great Boston outfield contributed his share in an airtight defense. Lewis made a wonderful catch of Midkiff's long fly in the seventh, and as this was followed by singles by McKee and Daniels the catch was a runner. Daniels attempted to count with Fisher when Wolter singled in the second, but he was nailed at the plate on a fine throw by Speaker. In the first stanza Cree walked, and was doubled off first when Chase lined to Hooper. As the bases were filled at this time, Daniels and Hartzell having walked, a punture was put in a rally that might have resulted in a basketful of runs.

Harry Wolter played a pretty game in center field for the Yankees, taking care of five putouts. McKee made a busy day at short, but he slipped up on two of the nine chances that came his way. However, he surprised every one by cracking out two hits and scoring two of the three runs counted by New York.

Boston tallied in the first on a run by Hooper, singles by Yerkes and Janviri and a couple of outs. Tris Speaker getting in a stolen base, which helped the cause materially. These two runs were accounted by New York in the second, when, by singling to right, Fisher kept the good work with a hit to center, and McKee went to third when Speaker fumbled the ball. Daniels was hit, filling the bases, and a wild pitch by Wood let McKee in. Wolter's single to center scored Fisher, but Daniels was out, Speaker to Cady.

The Yankees went ahead in the seventh on McKee's single to left, Fisher's sacrifice and Daniels's single. The Red Sox tied it up again in the eighth, when, with one out, singles by Yerkes and Speaker and a pass to Lewis filled the bases. Janviri sent a long fly to Cree and Yerkes counted. Speaker stole third, but Engle died, McKee to Chase.

BENDER SAVES DAY FOR THE ATHLETICS

Checks Rush of the Senators When Brown Weakens in the Ninth.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.)
Philadelphia, May 24.—Charles Albert Bender, mighty pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics and pride of the Philadelphia tribe, was again called upon to rush into the box and save the day for his team. In the ninth inning of the game to-day between the Athletics and the Washington Senators Bender answered the call and held the Senators at bay, and the Athletics won by a score of 4 to 2.

For eight innings Carroll Brown directed the game in masterly fashion, but in the ninth inning the Senators jumped on him. In a trice three singles rang out, and these, coupled with an error, scored a run. At this juncture Connie Mack informed Brown that he was about through for the day, and the swarthy skinned Bender stepped into the box.

There were two on base, but that failed to disturb Bender any. He passed the first batter, filling the bases, but to the indignation of the crowd, struck out "Chick" Gandell and caused old "Germ" Schaefer to pop to Jack Barry, ending the inning and the game.

George Mullin, the old star of the Detroit Tigers, had little of a puzzling nature to offer, and in the sixth inning the Athletics got to him for four hits, worked him for two bases on balls, which, with a sacrifice bunt, scored four runs.

Morgan, the infelder of the Senators, was spied by J. Franklin Baker when the latter slid into second base in the sixth inning. Morgan's wrist was badly torn and he was forced to retire from the game.

SUPERBAS FAIL TO CHECK THE PHILLIES

Alexander the Great Emulates the Warrior of Old in Hard Fought Battle.

HITS APLENTY BUT NO RUNS

Brooklyn Pounds the Ball When Bases Are Empty, but Can't Connect with Men on Paths.

"Alexander the Great" ruled with autocratic hand in pitching Philadelphia to victory over the faltering Superbas at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 0. This was the fourth consecutive defeat suffered by the Superbas, and the faint-hearted are beginning to wonder just when Dahlen's pets will get back into their winning ways. The Phillies will not leave Ebbets Field until Wednesday, and during that time the Giants will hold forth with the Boston Braves. The more apprehensive already see a revision of the percentage column, with the Superbas in a lowly berth.

There could be no excuse for the defeat. The Superbas hit Alexander safely nine times, and on several occasions gathered their hits in small clusters, but to no purpose. When a timely wallop might have accomplished something of value the mighty Alexander rose and was at his best. In the fifth inning Brooklyn filled the bases on three hits, with only one out. Zach Wheat, the coming breaker, and John Hummel, were coming up, and everything was shaped for a Brooklyn scoring bee. It seemed. Alexander was in no mood to allow any scoring. He caused Wheat to dribble one to the box, forcing Moran at the plate, and then made Hummel ground to Mike Doolan, forcing Wheat at second.

That was Brooklyn's only real chance to score or win. One man or more found his way to the paths for the Superbas in every inning except the sixth and seventh, when they walked the plank in order, but negotiate a run they could not. In the second inning, after Hummel struck out, Smith and Fisher singled, and it looked rosy, but Alexander turned on the high speed and struck out Miller and Ragan in a hurry. Stengel had a fair day with the willow and got three hits.

Despite the inclement weather there were some 12,000 "fans" in the stands when "Hank" O'Day took his station behind the plate and ordered play to begin. It rained at various times throughout the game, varying in volume from a slight drizzle to a drenching downpour that brought a hawl from the boys in the bleachers. These critics of baseball and weather demanded that the game be called, but when it seemed that O'Day was about to suspend hostilities the rain ceased for the time being. The field was soft and bothered the players not a little, but, on the whole, the game was well played.

Ragan, "Roaring Pat" was on the rubber for the Superbas, and the torador got a dressing down in the first inning that he will not soon forget. Half a dozen clean, hard hits, including a triple by Magee, produced three runs, the total for the day. Ragan settled down after the opening number, and while he was hit hard at intervals, managed to keep his head above water. In all, he allowed twelve hits, and every man on the Quaker City team made at least one. Magee, Robert and Doolan got two each as their share of the plunder.

If the spectators were somewhat dampened, they saw a few plays that made them forget their troubles and cheer to the echo. Wheat's catch of a drive by Paskert in the seventh inning was a classic, while Moran's capture of Magee's foul in the same frame was all that could be asked of any one. Moran crashed into the fence, but he held the ball. Doolan made a ripping catch of Callahan's bouncer in the ninth inning and clicked off a double play to Luderus, ending the game.

There could be no doubting the intention of the Phillies. Paskert opened the game by beating out a grounder to shortstop. He took second when Knabe sacrificed and scored on Robert's hit to right. Robert completed the circuit when Magee tripped to the right field fence. Fisher stopped Cravath's drive and retired him at first, holding Magee on third. Luderus's single scored Magee, and Doolan hit to Wheat. Killifer drove a safe one to Fisher, filling the bases. Luderus, however, overran third, and Fisher's quick throw to Smith nailed him off the bag.

Yankees Announce Plans for Luxurious New Home

Reinforced Concrete Stands to Accommodate 31,000 Will Be Built on Uptown Site.

Complete plans for the new home of the New York Yankees, which will be one of the largest and best equipped baseball parks in either of the big leagues, were announced yesterday. Extensive grading has already been done at the site selected, at Broadway and 225th street, and by another season the American League representatives in this city hope to have grounds as fine as the Giants and Superbas.

TIME HAS COME TO REPEL THE PHILLIES

Giants and Superbas to Join Forces This Week Against Common Enemy.

TEST FOR LEAGUE LEADERS

Yankees Facing Some Strenuous Days Against Red Sox, Athletics and the Fast Going Naps.

All New York will be in arms against the fighting, fast going Phillies this week, and the "fans" have reason to anticipate some real battles of baseball at Ebbets Field and the Polo Grounds before the next six days roll around.

Doolin's Daisies, as they are sometimes called in Philadelphia, arrived here yesterday, leading the National League race and flushed with what amounted to almost a clean sweep of the games with the Western clubs. They must face the Superbas for three more games and then move across the bridge to the Polo Grounds, where the Giants will take a hand in trying to repel a team which now looks like their most bitter rival for the pennant.

Four games will be crowded into three days over the sea of Coogan's Bluff, as two will be played on Memorial Day. No better arrangement could have been made for a holiday attraction in this city if the schedule committee had been specially bribed. The huge stadium will be packed, with standing room even at a premium, if the sun shines on Friday. The "fans" realize that the Giants must beat the Phillies to hold a forward place in the race, and they will be out to the last man to judge for themselves which is the stronger team and incidentally to root for the Giants.

The Phillies have commanded respect by their play this year. They have fought their way to the top and are sticking there as if no power in baseball could dislodge them. The Quakers have a pitching staff in Alexander, Seaton, Chalmers, Rixey, Moore and Brennan that ranks second to none on results this season, while the team as a whole is strong, well balanced and wonderfully confident. Nothing succeeds like success, and so far this year Charley Doolin has had most of his players on the field and not in the hospital, where so many were a year ago. If the Superbas and Giants between them cannot check this mad rush it might be well to reserve seats for the world's series in Philadelphia next October.

The Giants are on the eve of their first visit to the Polo Grounds this year, losing two and carrying two to a tie. They took revenge when the Giants visited Philadelphia, however, and to date have won four out of six from the National League champions. The Western clubs were just a means to the end of climbing. The Quakers won three games out of four from the Cardinals, three straight from the Cubs, with one postponed on account of rain, and three straight from the Cincinnati Reds, also with one postponed. They have been strong offensively and defensively, and they can be counted on to make a bold bid at the Polo Grounds, as they realize full well that the Giants are the ones they have to beat to carry a pennant to Philadelphia.

Frank Chance and his Yankees, who returned from their first invasion of the West on Saturday, where they won seven games and lost eight, will play three more games with the Red Sox at the Polo Grounds this week before going over to Philadelphia for a hard series with the Athletics, which includes a holiday engagement. They will be back on the following Monday to entertain the Western clubs, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis appearing here one after the other.

Seaton, of the Phillies, has not lost a game this year. Neither has Alexander or Rixey.

"Tubs" Schauer, the promising pitcher of the Superior club, in the Northern League, is in big demand. Dick Kinsella, scout for the Giants, made a cash offer for him yesterday, but the amount was not announced. W. J. Sumner, owner of the club, says the pitcher has not been sold to the Cubs, and naturally is holding out for a big price.

Jimmy Clark, of the Chicago White Sox, was reinstated yesterday by the National Commission. Clark stated that the pressure of business and illness in his family prevented him from reporting to the club this spring.

Clyde Milan is as fast as ever on the bases, and the Washington outfielder is likely to smash his own mark of eighty-eight stolen bases, established last year, before the season is over. He has pilfered twenty-four bases to date, a good start as the league race is young.

PIKE WINS NINE-MILE RUN.
Jesse R. Pike, of the Winton Athletic Club, who had a handicap of 3 minutes 15 seconds, captured the open nine-mile run of the O'Keefe Athletic Association, held at Harrison, N. J., yesterday.

He took the lead at the third mile and was never headed.

The summary follows:

Name and club. Handi-Actual

Jesse R. Pike, Winton A. C. 3:15 34:27

C. Gilmore, St. Augustine A. C. 2:50 33:43
